CLEAN-UP MAYOR HAS NO FEAR OF PLOTS

SEATTLE'S CHIEF SMILES AT THREAT
Mrs. Bertha K. Landes, newly elected mayor, who has started vigorously to purge her city of lawlessness, is unperturbed when informed that men on a train were heard planning her death. (I.N.R.)

THREAT TO KILL WOMAN MAYOR

Seattle, Wash., June 15 (A.P.)—Police here today said they had been notified of a plot to assassinate Mrs. Bertha K. Landes, recently elected Mayor of Seattle.

It was said that a man overheard details of the conspiracy while en route here from Everett, Wash., on a train. Mrs. Landes asserted she was not perturbed.

Seattle, Wash., June 15 (A.P.)—A dozen men were hurt from their beds and several were knocked down by flying furniture when a bomb exploded in a Salvation army social center, where forty persons were asleep or at work late last night.

Y. M. C. A. SANDY ISLAND CAMP OPENS JUNE 23

Opening of Sandy Island, the men's camp of the Boston Y. M. C. A., has been set for June 23. The camp will continue until August 30, under the direction of Philip A. Gould, with C. H. Hill as associate director and woodcraft leader. Edward Pierce, director of physical education at Augusta, Me., High School, will serve in a similar capacity at Sandy Island camp. He was formerly captain of the University of Maine football team. Attendance will be larger than last year, early registration figures indicate.

Royal Visitors Hope to Get Some Rest in Rhode Island's Social Program Is Cut

Newport, R. I., June 15.—Under a leaden sky and out of a gray sea, the Corsair, J. P. Morgan's yacht, nosed into Newport today, bringing Crown Prince Gustavus Adolphus of Sweden and his consort, the Crown Princess Louisa.

A drizzling rain had failed to dampen the ardor of the welcome, and Newport, for all its noisiness, felt a thrill of excitement as the royal suite wound its way through the fashionable colony between lines of cheering spectators.

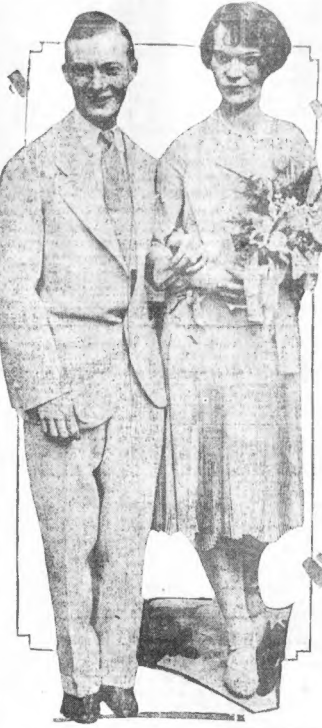

The Prince and his consort came to Newport for a "honeymoon" in the hectic itinerary that has kept them constantly in the public eye since their arrival in this country. For that reason their program here has been cut to three parties, a dinner tonight at Beacon Hill House, the summer home of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Curtis James, being the first of the fete.

GUESTS AT VANDERBILT'S.
Tomorrow after a lightening tour, the royal pair will be guests of an all fresco lawn fete to be given by James in the Blue Gardens and the colorized Swiss Village at Beacon Hill House.

General and Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt will entertain them at dinner in the evening. Thursday morning they will leave for Worcester to be guests at the mid-summer festival of the Swedish Federation. From Worcester, the Prince and Princess will go to Boston for a brief stay before leaving for the States.

"BOTTLED FOR LOVE"
Mrs. Russell Scott, who will enter a glass case and fast for days in an effort to raise cash to pay costs of her husband's third trial for murder of a drug clerk in Chicago. She will charge admission for persons to see her "bottled for love to save a life."

HERE ARE 'MR. AND MRS. FRECKLES'

AFTER THE "I WILL'S" AND "I DO'S"
Mr. and Mrs. Wesley Barry's first photo as that. It was taken immediately after the Rev. George Edmonson made them man and wife in Newark, N. J. She was Miss Julia Wood and is 23. "Freckles" is 18 and has been a movie star for several years.

IRISH FLAPPER DOESN'T SMOKE, DRINK-OR PAINT

New York, June 15 (U.S.S.)—The Irish rose still retains her beauty, according to the Rev. Eugene McCarthy, rector of St. Paul's Roman Catholic Church at Dublin, Ire., who arrived here today en route to the Eucharistic Congress at Chicago with 15 pilgrims on the North German Lloyd liner Sierra Ventana. The party consisted of three German priests, 13 Irish priests and 5 laymen.

"The Irish flapper is just like many of your American flappers," said McCarthy, "except that she doesn't drink or smoke, and doesn't have to use point or powder, because nature takes care of the bloom of the Irish girl. She wears short skirts and bobbed hair, which is sensible, and has the old-fashioned daintiness."

Maurice T. Riordan, who managed the party, said Ireland is on the verge of a period of great prosperity. The proposed harnessing of the Shannon river, he says, will provide power and railroads enough to make the Emerald Isle independent of all the world.

British to Probe Murder
Canton, June 15 (A.P.)—British submarines have been dispatched to investigate the murder by bandits of an Englishman named Phillips, an employee of Asiatic Petroleum Company.

WEDDING OF VERA BANNED

Countess Cathcart Forced to Cancel Marriage to Young American

London, June 15.—Draining to the dregs the bitter cup of disappointment, Vera, Countess of Cathcart, has, it is understood here, called off her underlings to Olden House.

The church of England sternly opposed to the union of divorced couples or the remarriage of divorced women, frowned upon her alliance with the son of the wealthy Dutch-American banking family.

All preparations had been completed for the wedding to occur during the weekend and, when it was suddenly called off, temporarily, the reason was not given.

The Countess was anxious to have a church wedding, it is understood, and sought church sanction of the marriage. Although every argument was used, the heads of the church refused to give permission in any Episcopal rectory to perform the ceremony.

Now, it is said, that she has given up her wedding plans completely. It might be possible to procure a minister of some other denomination to perform the ceremony, but because of her determination to have an Episcopal ceremony, friends say she has called it off indefinitely.

MADEIROS ASKS FOR NEW TRIAL

The fight to save the life of Celestino Madeiros, convicted slayer, was started toward the Supreme Court again today when Attorney Frank J. Hughes, his counsel, filed a bill of exceptions in Superior Court in Dedham.

The exceptions were taken immediately in Pictburg, where Judge Lawton will pass upon them, after which the high court will be called upon to decide whether or not the court erred in failing to give Madeiros an opportunity to address the court at his trial.

Plunge of the bill of exceptions was a direct result of the recent denial by Judge Lawton of a motion for a new trial. If the Supreme Court grants Madeiros a new trial it will be his third. The first trial ended with a conviction, but the Supreme Court ruled a new trial because of an error and then Madeiros was retried and convicted a second time of slaying a Wren thorn last, ended during a lull.

PRES. GREEN SPEAKS AT ROTARIAN CONVENTION

Denver, Col., June 15 (A.P.)—Rotarians united today in the official business of their annual convention today with reports of officers and committees. The principal part of the day's program, Address were delivered today by several prominent men, including William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor.

COP CLAIMS HE WAS 'DIZZY'

Cliffy, but not to blame, was the defense of Patrolman Lester G. Strachan before a trial board of three police captains for failure to ring in at home on his beat for four hours in the early morning. Strachan declared he does not know where he was between 3 and 4 o'clock when he was supposed to be patrolling a beat on the Common with regular reports to Lagrange street station.

He was stationed in France during the World War and testified at his trial, according to the police report, that he suffered a dizzy spell while on patrol and after that all was blank until the time when he again reported, long evening, at his station. Police Commissioner Wilson has the evidence under consideration.

U.S. SETS WORLD RECORD IN 19 BILLION TRADE BALANCE

Washington, Ju 15. (U.S.N.)—The United States on June 30 will hang up a half-century favorable trade balance of approximately $66,126,000.

This remarkable achievement, without duplication by any nation in the world's commercial history, was accomplished through American sales abroad of $66,126,000 since June 1, 1913.

States purchased in foreign markets commodities valued at $36,344,000,000.

These figures were disclosed today by the Department of Commerce in connection with announcement of foreign trade statistics for the first months of the present fiscal year ending June 30.

BETTY ALDEN'S COMMENT ON SOCIETY

Miss Rachel Grant of Rochester and Boston, Marries Philip Brown on Friday Next

LUNCHEONS, THEATRE PARTIES, DINNERS, picnics and motor trips punctuate, in the very jolliest pre-nuptial way, almost every hour between now and next Friday at 4 o'clock, the wedding day and hour for Miss Rachel Grant of Rochester and Boston and Philip Brown, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jonathan Brown, Jr., of Bay State road and "Red Top Farm" in Hamilton.

THIS EVENING Mr. William Mayo, uncle of the bride, is host to the wedding principals and the wedding party, finishing off a dinner at the Algonquin Club with attendance at "Tearful Enemy."

AT NOON Miss Dorothy White is hostess. She is a bridesmaid and for the bride and feminine members of the entourage give a luncheon out at her home in Brookline. Tomorrow a picnic is on the cards.

IT WILL BE an all-day affair, the entire party with their chaperones motoring into the country for an all day luncheon. Tomorrow comes the rehearsal, when best man and honor maid, principals and attendants go through preliminaries.

ON THURSDAY evening all the party gathers at the hospitable home of the Jonathan Browns, Jr., in Bay State road, for dinner and dancing. Friday itself sees the wedding and a most unusual and especially lovely affair it is to be.

THEN FOLLOWS a large reception at the Hotel Somerset. Miss Grant and her mother, Mrs. Will Grant, formerly of Rochester, New York, have been making their home at the Hotel Beaconsfield.

MISS GRETCHEN BROWN To be married here next October

A contention well upheld by the young woman's enormous popularity.

AN EXPERT in the middle, equal to at home in the ballroom, evincing the latest terpsichorean intricacies, solo with the individual, as that the French woman seem show no enviable, and popular as she is accomplished, Miss Houghton's high place is in diplomatic circles.

MRS. JACK'S SHELLETS debutante party, in Miss Houghton's honor, caused considerable stir in the younger set. Mrs. Shelle's former Miss Houghton of New Jersey is bringing a new trail across through social alone with all manner of sumptuous entertainment, like into the affair sponsored by "Mrs. Harry Brown."

FROM A LARGE SUITE at the Claridge Mrs. Brown is busy settling up with the month her from the social arena because of illness. The Imperial Treasure and Kippers for 4 & 2 London wonders what new and liars dab or fete will be added as social achievements.

Boy's Skull Fractured

John H. Moran of East Weymouth won first prize today in the Bluebonnet Evening American Unusual Picture Contest and Mrs. William Chapman, No. 24 Weymouth street, Weymouth, was awarded second honors. Women continue to show keen interest in the contest and have carried off a number of the awards.

The first prize is two $1 seals for the annual boxing and athletic carnival of the Cross-Capitulation Post-American Legion, to be held at Brown Field, June 21. Winner of the second prize receives two $1 seals for the carnival which will be one of the biggest athletic treats of the season.

These awards are made each day during the contest for the two best pictures submitted. Human interest, humor and unusualness are the basis of the award. The photographs are not considered.

Scapholds are winning a lot of the awards. But not the pictures and photos and you are if there isn't some that may win you two seals for the carnival. If you haven't any unusual pictures in your collection, you can snap a few with your camera. Send in your entries to the Unusual Picture Editor.

The contest closes June 15, and the last two winning photos will be published on June 21.

Lather and lather, in spite of even hard water

WHOLLY NEW • UTTERLY DIFFERENT
EVERYWHERE IT CAPTIVATES •

IN voices gay with happy anticipation, women order: Lux Toilet Form! A dozen or two dozen cakes at a time!

Everywhere the same excited welcome! "A success so immediate that we can't keep up with the demand," says one big store.

How you revel in the luxury of its caressing lather, its endearing fragrance, its blissful aftermath of delicious well-being!

These are the qualities that used to make imported soaps such a lovely temptation in spite of their hideous prices. Lux Toilet Form has every one of these enchantments that used to beguile you so.

It is made by the identical method beauty-wine France uses for her finest soaps de toilette. That is why Lux Toilet Form is so different from white soaps you are used to.

That is why it is so satin-smooth and firm, fine-textured! Why it lathers and lathers delightfully. And why even wickedly hard water cannot quell its delicious, bubbling lather that makes you feel so luxurious, so much more charming.

In its demure sprigged wrapper of lavender and white you will find Lux Toilet Form wherever toilet soaps are sold. And the family joy delight in this new different soap. Lux Toilet Form is just ten cents. Lever Bros. Co., Cambridge, Massachusetts.

Perfected to meet the most critical demands

THE first consideration of every thoughtful housewife and every careful mother — her family's health. And because it affects their health more than any other one thing — her family's diet.

These women insist upon foods that are primarily nourishing — of course — and then delicious, satisfying.

White Rose Bread was perfected to meet just such critical demands. Nationally known food and nutrition experts with the most rigid standards were asked to pass upon this bread. Their advice, together with the scientific skill of leading bakers has produced the appetizing, full-flavored, nourishing loaf that the discriminating housewives are now serving.

Start today to let your family enjoy appetizing, tender-crust slices of White Rose Bread.

Give them the firm, evenly-browned toast that only such a fine textured bread will make.

Your grocer has White Rose Bread — baked not once but twice daily. Whenever you order you may be sure of getting loaves that are fragrantly fresh. Massachusetts Baking Company.

Morning and afternoon WHITE ROSE BREAD is baked and rolled to your grocer so you may have it just a few hours from the oven wherever you order.

THREE CHARMING ENTRANTS FOR BOSTON GIRL

FROM ROCKLAND

Miss Helen O'Connor in sports suit; coat of flannel with shaded stripes alternating with white, skirt white flannel, hose white chifon, shoes white kid, "ragabond" hat, Milan straw.

FROM ALLSTON

Miss Anna Sassone in dark blue crepe with front collar and cuffs and ash of plaid; dark blue Bengalia hat trimmed with gray straw; shoes and stockings are gray.

STYLES VOGUE ADDED TO

To the vogue of styles in millinery add the "ragabond."

Miss Helen P. O'Connor of Rockland wears a becoming "ragabond" with her sports clothes. She is one of the trimly costumed girls whose photograph is submitted for consideration as a typical Boston Girl of 1926—the girl most distinctive in expressing her poise and personality in her manner for whom The Boston Evening American is conducting a contest.

Miss Anna Sassone of Allston recounts her smiling countenance with a snug-fitting Bengalia in the photograph she submits, while Miss Doreen Lee of Boston Proper, favors the "cartwheel" mode in millinery to offset her attractive sport suit.

The smiling photographs of these two girls are also to be considered by the judges selecting The Boston Girl of 1926.

The Silver Laurel Wreath, which, in addition to $500 in gold, will be awarded by the Boston Evening American to the girl chosen as The Boston Girl of 1926 is being specially wrought by silversmiths. In design it is a replica of the ancient Greek laurel wreath of Greece and Rome.

Crested laurels representing The Silver Laurel in miniature are being made, too, to be awarded to the girls honored as second and third girls most

FUNERAL SERVICES FOR MRS. HOLDEN TOMORROW

Funeral services will be held tomorrow at 9 a. m. for Nellie E. wife of William H. Holden, prominent as a political and editorial writer in Boston for the past thirty years. The services will be at St. Jerome's Church, Bridge street, North Weymouth. The body will later be buried in the Holden family lot at Holliston, N. H.

Mrs. Holden for twenty years before her marriage in 1884 was a resident of the South End, in the old Cathedral parish. For the past sixteen years Mr. and Mrs. Holden have lived at 21 Wenham street, North Weymouth. She was a woman of many quiet charities and enjoyed the friendship of a wide circle.

Typical of The Boston Girl of 1926. The girl selected as second recipient, as she desires, an evening gown valued at $100 or $150 in gold. The third award is a street ensemble valued at $100 or $150 in gold.

Four fashion, art and physical education authorities will choose The Boston Girl of 1926, including Mr. Leonard W. Barrett, director of the Bureau of Physical Education, Mr. Royal Bailey Farman, director of physical education of Massachusetts; Mr. Cyrus Dalish, the sculptor and Miss Lucy Park, fashion authority, associate editor of Harper's Bazaar.

You may have your photograph taken free of charge by coming in to The Boston Evening American office, No. 8 Washington square. Photographs may be sent by air of their relatives or friends. Please identify photographs fully, adding the telephone number and describing in detail the gown worn.

ATLANTA LEADS SUNNY SOUTH

lengths may NOT go as an industrial State in days to come. Already the manufacturing of cotton in the United States practically is dominated by the South.

ATLANTA, the Capital City of Georgia, and the Gate City of the South, is the city to which the present progress and prosperity of the South is being heralded.

Real estate values in this city, as the years have gone by, have mounted in a way that almost has seemed incredible.

Increasing values have not been, however, things that have come of "boom" times or inflated or inflated speculative movements. Rather they come by orderly processes and in a conservative way. They are results that were inevitable.

And since Atlanta is so wonderful a city since its future may so vividly and actually be envisaged in the light of its remarkable past, and since it is a city near and dear to the heart of a Commonwealth of such tremendous potentiality, is the time not at hand when Atlanta and Georgia should present to the world an aggressively united front, to the end that Atlanta and Georgia may prosper and progress in the hereafter as never before?

Atlanta glories in growing and prospering with Georgia. Atlanta involves the comradery of its sister cities in the Commonwealth it asks that it may be permitted to serve with all of its might and resourcefulness as a factor in a community advance.

And to that end The Atlanta Georgian invites the other newspapers of Georgia to join with it in carrying to the four corners of the nation the convincing story of Atlanta's progress and growth—and without a prophetic vision of the glory that may come to this Empire State we all love so much.

If the other newspapers of Georgia will join The Atlanta Georgian in this work, then will such an avalanche of constructive newspaper publicity have been set in motion as never was known before.

Let the Georgian shoulder to shoulder with The Atlanta Georgian march, as Henry Grady advised, "with well-organized ranks all one way," and for the common benefit of all, and great will be the result.

No State has the variety of its climate, soil and mineral wealth that Georgia has. No State or the South has finer water power to be harnessed and utilized for commercial purposes. No State has a nobler or more intelligent population and citizenship. And no city in the nation more truly typifies its State than Atlanta in Georgia.

Let us go forth and tell our story in simple words of truth that will arrest the attention and commend the respect of all this Great Republic.

LOOK FOR PRIZE ON JUNE 18

On Friday, June 18, the Boston Evening American will announce by one of those who have been following the serial "Wives Adrift." The subject, "Old Charlotte deserveth Reck Happiness" proved a popular one to readers of the American. Over 1200 letters came in showing an enthusiastic interest in the story, and many contestants added, at the end of their essays, that "it was the most thrilling story" they had ever read.

LOW RATES FOR ALIEN VETS

Washington, June 15 (Universal).—Committee in both Houses of Congress will act on the Tillman-Wadsworth bill today. It authorizes the shipping board to furnish transportation at cost to foreign-born Americans who were in the United States before the war, and who until recently have been prevented from returning to the United States because of quota restrictions of the immigration laws. Their return is permitted as the result of the exemption law urged by the Hearst newspapers.

Story of a Boston Girl Who Liked Jazz Music and the Bright Lights

"A girl who lets men kiss her and maul her is like a peach that loses its bloom from too much handling," was what Moms had said. Merry thought of the wisdom of her mother.

READ THIS FIRST

MARY ANN LOCKE, whose nickname, MERRY, describes her perfectly, falls in love with an unknown man whom she sees every noon hour when she goes out for lunch. Merry is trying to learn stenography at a Back Bay business school, but her brain is so full of the MAN IN GRAY, as she calls him, that she cannot get her mind down to typewriting and shorthand. Besides that, she is carrying on a little flirtation with DERRICK JONES, a boy of her own age who lives next door to her.

MOMS, Merry's mother, is disgusted with her because she shows so little interest in her studies. Her oldest sister, HELEN, gently scolds her because she lets Derrick kiss her when she's not engaged to him. And even the youngest of the Locke sisters, JINNY, bluntly tells Merry that she's "boy-crazy."

All this worries Merry not at all. The idea of being a stenographer doesn't appeal to her, and she wishes Moms would let her leave business college. It makes her tired to study.

On the morning of her twentieth birthday, Merry makes up her mind to become acquainted with the unknown MAN in the Gray Suit. She goes out into Boylston street at noon, determined, somehow or other, to make him speak to her. As she stands in the doorway of the business college she sees him coming toward her down the street.

(NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY)

CHAPTER II

MERRY stepped along smartly into the noonday glare of Boylston street. Her cheeks were flushed with the excitement of the moment, and she shone in the desire of her smiling grown girl.

Two or three men twisted their fat, old heads at her as she started alone on the crowded sidewalk. From the corner of her eyes Merry saw them look at her.

Not for worlds would she have let them know that she noticed them. No, indeed! Not they, with their bad complexions and bulging, staring eyes!

But she liked to have them look at her, all the same. It flattered her. It convinced her that she was as pretty as she hoped she was. "Let 'em look!" she said blithely to herself, as she swung along on the lightest of feet. "They can't hurt me!"

When the Man in Gray caught sight of her he looked at her in a way that thrilled her down to the very tip of her toes. His dark eyes seemed to say: "There you are, at last! I've found you!" A pulse in

HUB KNEW CARDINAL AS 'POOR PRIEST'

APPEARS TO LIKE HUB VISIT

By JAMES WALSH

The arrival of Michael Cardinal Ritter von Faulhaber, archbishop of Munich, in New York, traveling incognito and garbed as a poor priest, occasions surprise to Bostonians who remember his memorable visit to this city a little more than three years ago.

The German Cardinal had come to this country to seek enough money from kind-hearted Americans to buy bread for the starving little children in Munich.

He went to Washington and then to New York, where arrangements had been made that he could continue his journey to Boston in comfort. The conductor of the train had provided for parlor car seats for himself and his secretary, the Rev. Henry J. Kinnane.

He was only "poor priests." Diocesan officials went to the South Station to greet the German Cardinal. One of them met the train at Providence, but when the express pulled in Cardinal von Faulhaber evidently was not alone. Given the Pullman conductor declared he had traveled through the entire train but hadn't seen anybody appearing to be a cardinal. The conductor said that there were "a couple of poor priests in one of the day coaches."

Diocesan officials and newspaper men who had gone to meet the Cardinal were preparing to leave at that moment when two figures approaching from the rear of the long train. One of them was tall, long-haired, and shaggy-headed, but as vigorous as an oak. He was dressed simply, very poorly.

Stepping up to him as a last effort to find the Cardinal I asked him the question. He admitted he was Cardinal von Faulhaber and stated that he had traveled all the way from Washington by day coach so that he could save a few pennies he would get on the refund for the parlor car seat. "To help me buy bread for my poor, starving little children of Munich."

His pathetic appeal in the pulpit of the Cathedral of the Holy Cross stirred a large congregation. Evidently he has not changed since that time three years ago.

None of his fellow passengers on the steamer, Albert Seiler, was aware that "Professor M. Michaelis" was Cardinal von Faulhaber until she she doctored at New York and he was met by a delegation of German priests.

Until he leaves for the Eucharistic Congress at Chicago, he will stop with his former secretary, Father Kinnane, now the pastor of the Church of Our Lady of Sorrows, Brooklyn.

PERET'S RESIGNATION TO UPSET FRENCH CABINET

Paris, June 15 (U.S.A.)—Raoul Peret's resignation as Minister of Finance will be followed by a general shuffling of the political picture, which may involve other cabinet changes. This was intimated today when an official communique announcing the resignation of Peret declared the resignation was "because of the attitude of a parliamentary political formation corresponding to the wishes of an opinion which demands a united effort."

Peret is expected to head in the reconstruction of the entire cabinet if he fails to get desired support in his efforts to stabilize the franc.

Incognito

VISITED HUB, TOO When Cardinal Ritter von Faulhaber visited Boston three years ago he came incognito, just as he arrived in New York this week. He used the money luxurious travel would have cost to feed hungry little children.

FIERY KISS WINS SANITY FIGHT FOR SAVAGE

Los Angeles, June 15 (U.S.A.)—All Hollywood was today discussing the kiss Clara Bow, beautiful fifteen-year-old film actress, gave Robert D. Savage, former Yale athlete, who attempted suicide when the actress later spurned his love and as a result he had to stand trial as to his sanity.

After a witness had testified Mrs. Bow kissed Savage so fiercely that Savage was sane.

San Francisco, June 15 (U.S.A.)—William Randolph Hearst and his newspapermen are sponsoring the legislation. It was Mr. Hearst, in fact, who introduced, when the present Congress in 1904, the first Federal aid bill which became the model for the Federal aid policy now established in the United States.

Investing a dollar in good roads for every dollar so invested by the State.

National and State leaders, automobile and good roads men, entered the campaign that accompanied the Hearst newspaper's persistent retort of the road-building needs of the Nation. The newspapers pointed out that a four-day transcontinental trip by train was not a sufficient reason for the transportation problem—it must also be made possible for motorists to enjoy a ten-day trip from coast-to-coast.

GOOD BOYS BRING JOY TO WEST

Better roads! Continued development and improvement of transcontinental and interstate highways. Greater access to national forests through improvement in their roads and trails! Hand-in-hand co-operation of States and nation for increasing progress toward universal enjoyment of important highways everywhere in the United States!

San Francisco, June 15.—There was jubilation in San Francisco today that the attainment of these objects had been assured by the passage in the Senate last week of the so-called Dowell bill, promising Federal aid for another three years in financing construction of work on the national system of interstate and transcontinental highways.

The National Highways Bill, as it has come to be known, now goes to the President for signature. Since it is known that the bill was largely introduced by the Hearst newspaper, there is no doubt in the minds of those familiar with the bill that it will become law in short order.

From BOSTON to BROADWAY

By GEORGE M. COHAN

"NEW YORK at last," thought Master George Cohan, age fourteen, as he appeared at the Union Square Theatre for his first "Big Town" engagement. His enthusiasm turned to rage, however, when assigned to the worst "spot" on the bill, the opening act of the show. His act, instead of proving a riot, turned out to be a frost. And to add insult to already injured feelings, the New York audience stages a fist-fight during his act.

CHAPTER XIII. An American crowd would rather look at a prize fight any time than the best show on earth.

The noise was deafening, but I kept on reciting. No one out front was paying the slightest attention to me at all, with the exception of the piano player, who had it in for me anyway, so he sat there leering his head off as I belted my first verse, trying to make them hear what I was reciting about.

By the time the theatre "cop," had restored order I was weak in the knees from the audience noise I had been doing.

The thing that hurt me more than anything else was the thought that the piano player was getting "thick" with me. I finished with the regulation "break" in the centre of the stage, bowed and started to walk off while the audience, still laughing at my fight himself.

DRIVE FOR 'DRY' HUB HOLIDAY

In a campaign to make the Hub bone-dry on the holiday, June 17, police early today started a drive of land and sea forces against rum-runners, who, they were informed would try to bring in supplies at the first sign of stormy weather.

The police launch, Edwin U. Curtis, patrolled the city coastline all night with instructions to stop everything coming into the harbor and make searches.

WHEN the class of 1926, Harvard, changes its status of undergraduates to alumni a week from Thursday, sixty-six Harvard varsity athletes will conclude three seasons' participation in college sports.

Of this number, 25 are now in the varsity line-up, and 41 are in the all-star line-up. The 25 varsity athletes will miss 18 varsity games, while track will be without the very major sports and services throughout the nation. Nineteen members came from the ranks of Criminel persons. They are none too promising to the new head coach, Arnie Horvath, but the situation is not so alarming when one considers that only two regu-

While the number, sixteen, includes some men who were only air runners, there will pass through the Harvard gates next Thursday, a group of men known as the "16 whom all Harvard men" will also see Frank Kane, Rocky Wallers

Tennis Matches Halted by Heavy Downpour

By FRED C. LANE

Rain halted the progress of tennis players seeking the State singles title. Ten matches were played for this afternoon but, owing to the poor condition of the court, Chairman Badger thought best to bring the tournament up to date tomorrow by bringing into competition those who had not yet played.

Inside Golf

In the golf swing the player should feel a concentration of power in his hands. For this is where the power should be throughout the swing. The hands and the arms really control more than any other factor, the blow you deliver upon the ball. You can cultivate the concentration of power in the hands by beginning with the grip and the address. Stand loose with the body and, while addressing, tighten up the grip just enough so that the feel of the clubhead as you swing it back and forth gives you the impression you have a hammer in your hands.

Make the address a series of preliminary hammer-blows with the club head. Then, throughout the swing, keep the weight of the clubhead in the hands.

I've signed up with P.A. for life

Two months ago, I would have told you that I was pretty well satisfied with my smoking tobacco. I didn't know Prince Albert then! Gee, what a lot of tricks I missed without even knowing it. Never mind. I'm making up for lost time now. My jimmy-pipe is working double shifts.

I load up the minute breakfast is cleared away and hit it up from then until "lights out." That's one of the fine things about Prince Albert. You never tire of it. Each pipe-load tastes better than the last, if such a thing is possible. I know I'm set for life now.

Prince Albert is cool as a dip in the lake. No matter how hard you drive it, you never burn out a bearing. It is sweet as a check in the morning's mail. Fragrant, too, like fresh-picked flowers. Fragrant in the tin, and fragrant as you smoke it. Real tobacco, I tell you.

Maybe you think you are all set in the matter of smokings. I wouldn't stop there. Because, if you haven't smoked P.A., your best bet is still to be collected. On my say-so, and that of millions like me, why don't you try Prince Albert? I'll guarantee you'll be glad you did.

P.A. is sold everywhere in tins and boxes, and is sold in every store, drug store, and general store. It is sold in every store, drug store, and general store.

MEDBURY SAYS--

By John P. Medbury

THAT is the time of year when hundreds of women are dreading their winter blues and waiting for new arrivals for the winter.

MOST girls like to have four men a year. One for each season.

A MAN who's handsome in a moonlight coat might not look so good in a bathing suit.

ONE dame tried to keep her sweet heart the year 'round, but the mother got him in the summer.

AND she didn't want a fellow that she had to carry in a campbox.

HOWEVER, she wouldn't think of giving him the air. She puts him in storage in the living and takes him out again in the fall.

NO matter how popular a girl may be, she likes to have a couple of sweethearts in reserve.

ONE woman makes it a rule to take a new man in for an advance. She's afraid to go in on the down for next winter.

A BIRD in the hand is worth two in the bush.

SUMMER OFFICIALS are extremely reliable.

A MAN doesn't mind being steady in the rainy season, but he likes to circulate during the nice weather.

MOONLIGHT has lasted up more love affairs than marriage.

WINTER beauties are very seldom broken. It is the summer arrangements that are full of loopholes.

FROM now on when a man asks a girl to marry him he only intends to love, honor and obey during June, July and August.

HE reserves the right for September, October and November.

DAILY SHORT STORY

THE RESEMBLANCE

By Ruth Logan

HELEN BENNETT walked the And yet Billy had brought her from an orphanage after Helen's baby had died. He had denied knowing anything about the child's parentage.

"Daddy come soon," lisped Alina eagerly, of the frenzied woman. Suddenly Helen was on her knees. The baby hands were clutching tightly in her own. She loved this small mite equally as well as she could have loved her own. She knew why. It was Billy speaking with her lips, little smiling from her eyes. But it was too awful.

"Look Alina love mother or daddy best?" asked Helen for the first time in her life. She hated herself for the question as soon as it fell from her lips.

"Alina loves mother best than anybody except daddy."

Helen had always known it. Love her as the child surely did and still she loved her father better than any thing on earth. And his love for the child amounted to worship.

When Billy came home, Alina was sleeping. It was Saturday afternoon and he had formed the habit of returning at one o'clock to take Helen and Alina for a drive. "Where Alina, he asked to go to see his wife. Helen looked at the clock. Her eyes were smouldering.

"Deceive you," repeated Billy. "Explain that please, dear. I am utterly at sea."

"About Alina," went on Helen in a tight, tense tone.

"Oh, yes, about Alina." A great weariness had come over the man's face. There was a tear in his eye.

"You can't very well deny that your own flesh and blood would be more like you," said Helen, avoiding his eyes.

"No," confessed Billy softly. "The poor little child. I have often wanted to tell you, Helen, but somehow I haven't found a place. Her wicked mother."

"Stop right there," thundered Billy. "You nor anyone else shall ever speak a word against Alina."

"My God! So you had the audacity to name the child for her mother. I was wondering why you were so determined to call her Alina."

Helen's voice was only a mild reproach.

"Oh, it's all very well for you to stand there and say 'Helen' in that tone of voice, but take it home to yourself. What if I had betrayed you, had brought another man's child to this house and forced it on you?"

"Betrayed you? Helen, you must be mad. When you spoke, I thought you knew the whole story."

"Don't! What other explanation have you for those gray-green eyes and the Auburn hair?"

"That's Alina's hair. I've kept from crying out my secret. I never knew who the father was. And now I don't care. I thought the baby had gone wonderfully happy and I know you would have little sympathy for an erring girl. I should have told you at the hospital."

"And," added Billy, "if Alina even looks like one tenth as much as I do it will be a very great joy. Helen, I tell you the world's a strange place. For three years I have dreamed having her heartache to me with any assurance that I will be a police's latest man on earth."

FOXYP GRANDPA'S INTERESTING BEDTIME STORY

By Foxy Grandpa
Bobby and I were walking through Chinatown when we saw a Chinaman sink through a doorway with his long pigtail hanging down his back. They don't wear pigtails any more in China," said Bobby, "do they?"
"I replied, "they are cutting them off. But there was a time when a Chinaman would cut soon to his head as he would a pigtail. This was on account of his religion."
"Wouldn't it be funny if every Chinaman had a pigtail?" Bobby asked.
"If the girls don't have them now," Bobby said.
"That's right," I agreed. "How times change! When I was a boy it was quite the thing for every little girl to have two pigtails down her back, with the ribbons on them."

"That reminds me of a story," I added.
"Oh, tell me," said Bobby.
"It's about a wonderful man—an Englishman named Robert Morrison, who was born in England somewhere around the time of the American Revolution."
"What did he do, Foxy Grandpa?" Bobby asked.
"I'll tell you," I said.
"Robert Morrison was a shoemaker, and as a young man he learned his trade in his father's shop."
"But he had a great ambition; he wanted to be a missionary and go among the heathen and teach them the Christian religion."
"Morrison thought it would be a good thing if he knew something about medicine, so that when he got among the people whom he wished to teach, he could help them and well when they were sick."
"So he became a medical student at St. Bartholomew's Hospital in England. While there he not only studied medicine, but he found a young Chinaman in London who taught him Chinese and through whom he learned what kind of people he was going to work with in the distant land to which he was going.

"So when he had finished his course in medicine and mastered the Chinese language, he took a sailing ship, and months afterwards he arrived in China. And what do you think was the first thing he did when he got to China?"
"I couldn't guess," said Bobby.
"He grew a pigtail—so that he would be like the Chinese whom he was so anxious to convert."
"Good idea," said Bobby. "I'd like a pigtail about as much as I'd like a Chinese!"
"There he is," I said, "and this is the man Robert Morrison, who was in China for many years, and who was the first Christian missionary to the Chinese people. His

A WIFE'S MEDITATIONS

By Helen Rowland
THE hardest thing in the world for a man to realize is that a woman MEANS it, when she says "I'm going to leave him."
"What was that?" asked Bobby.
"He translated the Bible into Chinese, and today all the missionaries and their converts read that very Bible."
"No!" said Bobby. "That must have been an awful job."
"Yes," I said, "and that wasn't all. He translated the English Prayer Book into Chinese. And because his health finally broke he did some splendid work for his government."
"Trouble arose between the English government and the Chinese," said Bobby.
"Good idea," said Bobby. "I'd like a pigtail about as much as I'd like a Chinese!"
"There he is," I said, "and this is the man Robert Morrison, who was in China for many years, and who was the first Christian missionary to the Chinese people. His Lonis was tired. From morning till night she had been on her feet in the busy department store. No matter how she felt, she must serve her customers with a pleasant smile. Her head ached and her feet ached. Week after week, she felt her strength ebbing until she was in a run-down condition.

Not fit to work.

Her mother suggested that I try Leda's Pinkettes. Leda's Pinkettes Compound," she writes, "I took only three bottles and it brought me about all right." Through the Vegetable Compound, she found better health, to do her work and to be the other girls about it.

That was several seasons ago. Lonis is now Mrs. L. J. Van Dyke of 1448 Spring St., Morrell Park, Baltimore, Md. She is a mother of three healthy, active children. She says that she found the tonic effect of the Vegetable Compound helped her to do her work properly and easily and that she had good health. She can not afford to lose time from her work. Girls who suffer from a run-down condition should try Leda's Pinkettes Compound.

Heroic Mussolini

MUSSOLINI'S CHARMED LIFE

This picture from Il Duce, published in Florence, shows how Italy looks upon Mussolini with a combination of DE-VOTION, CONFIDENCE AND ANXIETY.

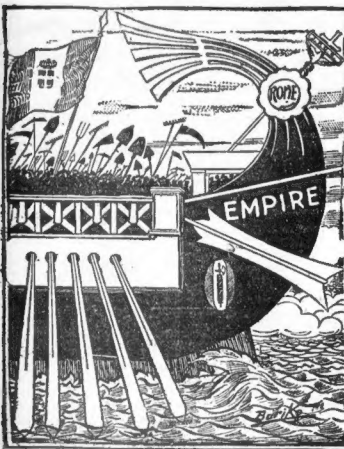

Under this picture the Italian editor writes: "LONG LIVE IL DUCE! He is protected by the star of Italy and the eye of God."

Numerous attempts have been made to murder the ruler of Italy. Men and women have made the attempt to kill him, but thus far have failed.

The picture shows Mussolini as his Italian admirers see him, surrounded by dangers, daggers and pistols pointing at him, but above his head the star of Italy and the eye of Divine Providence watching over him.

Such protection is reassuring and doubtless comforts Mussolini, but the average individual, lacking his adventurous nature, would rather be excused from his job. Only recently Mussolini was shot through the nose, the bullet narrowly escaping his brain.

A life without any special guiding star, but with less SHOOTING, would suit the average man.

THE ITALIAN NATION REACHES OUT

Mussolini's enemies in Europe accuse him of "imperialism," of seeking to restore the ancient empire of Rome that ruled all of Europe, making of the Mediterranean a Roman lake.

Mussolini IS an imperialist, his friends say. He DOES intend to restore the power of Rome to the hands of the Italian people, but without world dominion.

They show this war gallery of ancient Rome, but looking closer you see that the men on it are carrying spears, shovels and scythes. They want to find land in Africa that will grow grain and other foods. They are seeking to extend an empire of CIVILIZATION, of usefulness, happiness AND room for Italian people, not an empire of force.

There are various opinions of Mussolini in this country. These two pictures show the feeling of the great majority of Mussolini's compatriots at home. They admire him and trust him, and no wonder.

They had their choice at one time between Mussolini and anarchy. No wonder they took Mussolini.

The Waning Unexplored

The recent flight over the North Pole added something like 100,000 square miles to the earth's explored area.

The unexplored area is shrinking rapidly. Less than four million square miles of land which has not been seen remains. Half of this is in the uninteresting Antarctic, which is merely ice with no land.

If you are planning to see any portion of this globe's surface, which has not been seen before, you will have to hurry.

The Keystone State

TURNING THE WORLD UPSIDE DOWN

By DR. FRANK CRANE

IN THE apostolic days it was said of the early Christians, "They that turn the world upside down have come hither also."

Since then the Christian doctrine has been steadily turning the world upside down.

It has upset dynasties, overturned thrones, and exalted the people. Old and firmly entrenched institutions like slavery and dueling have gone by the board, and the hope is stirring in the air of the world that war shall pass.

Recent dispatches from China from an American military man say that the unrest in China originates in the many students who have acquired their education abroad and have come back to live in that country.

It has previously been stated by competent authority that there has never been a movement in China against tyranny and in favor of the welfare of the people that has not originated in the Christian missionaries.

Christianity is founded upon the principles of fundamental democracy. It proceeds upon the assumption that every man is worth while and that with the creator and ruler of mankind there is no distinction of class.

This idea slowly upsets all the hardened convictions of the human race. It is impossible for a people who have generally accepted the point of view of Christianity to resort to a system of government where any particular class is favored above the whole people.

Whether any particular form of Christianity, that is whether any particular church shall be successful in China or not, is a question that is open, but there is no question that once having accepted the fundamental point of view of the Christians, old institutions based upon privilege are bound to give way. Just what form this revolution will take depends upon circumstances, but the revolution is inevitable.

THE RHYMING OPTIMIST

By Alvine Michaels

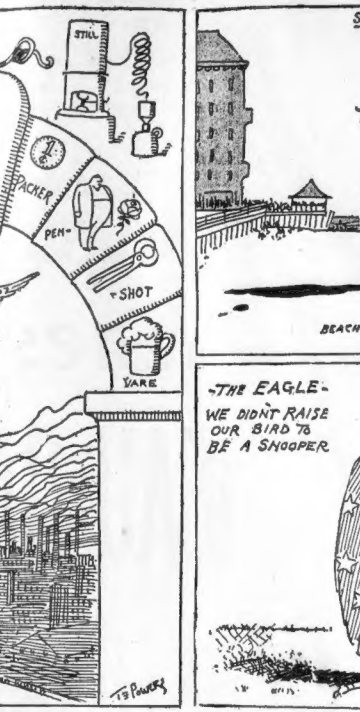

TODAY while I read to these pages I had the thoughts of a man long dead, they show me the innermost heart of him, though his dreams are all over and sped. A century old are the yestered long years; yet, strangely, old Time, as I read, retreats and I share in these hopes and fears. He, too, drank deep of the draught of life, knew Death's heavy hand was not to be, too, rejoiced in the ceaseless flow of life. On the swift years slip down this shining thread; new men with new roads to win, but though he and his dreaming are spent and sped, still his words show how all are kin.

LISTEN, WORLD!

"Is life worth living?" cries Janet. The forty years she has lived seem to grin at Janet. They thrust solid, empty hands beneath her blue eyes.

"I've lived all my life from broken, jangling lips. There is no beauty in them and no peace."

"Over my shoulder," my husband says in her despair. "My children are dead. My friends are all fair weather birds. Now that I am old, they have no use for me. I am alone and destitute in this strange city and there seems but one thing left for me—suicide. No, do not try to stop me, you, nor do I want your help. I am able to help myself; you can prove one thing to me. If you can prove to me that life is worth living, I'll stay. I'll stay."

Maybe that is a hard question to put to you, maybe I have no right to worry you with the thought that another person's life hangs on the turn of your words. But I am hard hit enough to enjoy the moment, and I am sure you will enjoy it, too. And anyone in your job ought to be made to face grim realities now and then. You pretend to solve problems—like how one can live for you, solve, is life worth living? I go or stay on the strength of your argument."

So you've thrown your life down as a gauntlet at my feet, stranger. And you expect me to pick it up and set it to rights again. I shall not pick it up. I shall not even pick it up to look at it. Not even your sudden dramatic appeal shall terrify me into thinking that I am responsible for your life, and on your head rest the responsibility of that life. So let you go to your doom you go alone, my dramatic friend. I'm not dragging my conscience with you.

That's my first answer to your demand. It's all right. No. I am why you're in your present fix. It is quite simple. I have spent a large part of your time in looking up drama. I have spent a large part of your time in looking up drama. I have spent a large part of your time in looking up drama.

BIG TAXES NO ONE THINKS ABOUT

By Garrett P. Servis,

Noted Astronomer and Writer on Scientific Topics of Popular Interest.

RESEARCH of a highly practical nature is that of the National Research Council's "Highway Research Board" on such questions as the relative effects of different types of roadbed on the wear of automobile tires, and on the consumption of gasoline and oil.

Thus far the roads found to show the least wear on tires are those constructed of concrete and brick. This is, perhaps, what most automobilists who give any attention to such matters would have expected.

Over a hard, smooth surface the wheels run easily, without bouncing or jarring, and one may feel pretty certain that when driver and passengers are comfortable in that respect the tires are contained also.

But there may be some surprise over the wide difference of wearing effects shown by different types of roads, as they are reported by Professor R. H. Rieberg of the University of Maryland, who is associated with the Research Board.

And whose conclusions are abstracted by Science Service.

Loss of Weight

For instance, it appears that while the average loss of weight from wear by each tire is about one ounce for every 100 miles run on brick or concrete, it is from two to seven times as great on gravel roads, and the wear on macadam varies from ten to fifty times the wear on concrete or brick, depending on the condition of the surface.

The next point considered in the summing up of the results of the research concerns the relative degree of wear on front and rear tires. This, too, in a general way accords with common observation.

Thus it is found that the wear of the front tires is from fifty to seventy-five per cent. less than that of the rear ones. The relatively greater wear of the rear tires is attributed by Professor Rieberg to "the bounding and spring of the

However, there is some satisfaction in knowing where your money goes—how much the whole thing costs, and how much had roads devour.

Result of Tests

"As a result of these studies it has been found that the increased consumption of gasoline required to travel on ordinary dirt roads costs the motorist as much as if he had to pay an additional tax of 44 cents a gallon on gasoline. Even good gravel roads impose an additional expenditure equivalent to a minor tax."

Experiments have also been made on wind resistance, corresponding to speeds of ten to forty miles an hour. From tests made with a number of different makes of cars "it has been found that when you drive at thirty-five miles an hour you are using about eight horsepower to overcome the wind resistance. If you reduce your speed to twenty-five miles an hour, you save five horsepower."

Even good gravel roads impose an additional expenditure equivalent to a minor tax."

Experiments have also been made on wind resistance, corresponding to speeds of ten to forty miles an hour. From tests made with a number of different makes of cars "it has been found that when you drive at thirty-five miles an hour you are using about eight horsepower to overcome the wind resistance. If you reduce your speed to twenty-five miles an hour, you save five horsepower."

The only direct control that owners of automobiles, as individuals, have over these various causes of increased wear and consumption is to take care of the condition of the road in a matter of policy administration. But even in the one line of economy open to them it is not likely that many car owners will take any action, for few are willing to go slow. However, there is some satisfaction in knowing where your money goes—how much the whole thing costs, and how much had roads devour.

Result of Tests

"As a result of these studies it has been found that the increased consumption of gasoline required to travel on ordinary dirt roads costs the motorist as much
